MONDAY AFTERNOON, JAN. 17.

JUDGE HORNIS resigned this morning. Gov. Smith and the senate will now have two judicial places to fill, and the nominations may be fully expected.

The Macon Telegraph thinks "it is exercising a very beneficial effect in preparing us for changes in our fundamental law, which so far as they go, for the outgrowth of abnormal conditions and excitements, will necessarily be unavoidable and ill-adapted to the permanent necessities of the people. Delay will therefore not be a loss, but a gain."

New in the legislature is in session, says the Waynesboro Expositor, but all these hearted Georgians who love their state, rise up as one man and demand protective laws for our poor dogs. Take Burke county, we haven't more than 3,000 dogs when we might easily have the number increased to 6,000, and a county that fosters sheep to the exclusion of those to no place to be in.

The earnings of the North & South railroad, from April 1874, to December 1st, 1875, were $16,076, the expenditures $15,988, leaving a balance of $787. The average expenses a month were $880, and the earnings $850. The Columbus Enquirer thinks that shows well for a road only twenty miles long. The engine is but better now than for several years, the tandem had new wheels, but three platform cars new floors.

"THOMAS BLACK" our excellent Washington correspondent has been appointed clerk of the committee on agriculture and manufactures. The Mobile Register "notes the fact with much pleasure; for the gentleman is one whose services to the party have been unremitting and intelligent, and he has, besides, never asked reward at its hands." Mr. Phillips is a gentleman of information and discretion; and he always acts up to Davy Crockett's motto, "Be sure you are right, then go ahead." His conferees in New Orleans—will rejoice with us that a just man has got a part of his deserts.

The Sapelo Appeal thinks "it would be most beneficial to the material prosperity of Georgia were our legislators to levy a tax of five dollars on each dog, and appropriate the proceeds of the tax gathered as is wisely done by the legislators of Tennessee. The destruction of sheep by the worthless curs in portions of the state is terrible, as many as sixty-four being reported as having been killed, within the past sixty days, in a radius of two miles in one neighborhood of Cobb county. Gentlemen of the legislature, "up at ten" for not your popularity, but legislate for the material prosperity of your people; and all good people will give you applause. Will you do it?"

In city property the five leading counties in the state have made the following official record since 1871:

Richmond has gained.....$1,100,000

Brown.....1,200,000

Fulton.....1,512,000

Mussoe.....105,000

Chatham.....1,005,000

The valuations of city property for 1875 were: Mussoe, $2,839,000; Fulton, $4,968,000; Richmond, $7,341,000; Fulton, $11,778,000, and Chatham, $12,534,000.

In money and solvent debts Bibb and Chatham have lost ground since 1871, while Fulton, Mussoe and Richmond have gained. In merchandise all the counties have gained since 1871, except Mussoe, which has lost.

SENATOR KIRKMAN's report on the account between the State and Clews &
Co. is a most able one. We regret that we are unable to give this morning but a part of it with the special message of the government.

Our correspondent, "More Anon," urges Hon. John H. James for the gubernatorial nomination with some strong reasoning. Paying a high compliment to Gov. Smith, he thinks it should be sent to the United States senate and Mr. James succeed him as governor. Typeographical errors in the communication will be readily detected.

BEN HILL'S SPEECH.

We present the speech of Mr. Hill in full. Extra copies of the paper or supplements may be had at our counter or through mail for five cents per copy.

AN APPLE OF DISCORD.

A significant fact is daily attaining greater prominence to careful observers of our political field. It is that the opposition to call a constitutional convention for Georgia is causing a more pronounced division of opinion among the people than the project of the metropolis anticipated. From various reasons, both of political and economical importance, a large section of the electors even of the democratic party, are deciding against the project and declaring it both unwise and inexpedient at this juncture.

The people know that a large percentage of the abuses and extravagances sought to be relegated for correction to the constitutional convention can easily and cheaply be abolished by careful and judicious efforts of the general assembly. The graver necessity which it would not be wise to leave to the slow and vacillating chances of the process of amendment, are still no less imperative as to demand the immediate call of a convention. Hence it is that many of the people deem the holding of a convention to be unwise and inexpedient.

The present year is one of great political importance. The general elections occur in the fall and the people will have quite enough employment for their judgments and patriotism in the discussion and decision of the great and significant issues which will be presented in the national and state contests. The possibility exists that a constitutional convention prior to the determination of those issues would not wholly concur in harmony in the ranks of our party, which will be charged with framing and procuring the adoption of the new charter of organic law.

The condition of the state of Texas to-day should warn the people of Georgia to forego awhile the luxury of a constitutional convention. The proposal to call the Texas convention developed the same differences of opinion which we note now in Georgia. The legislature was urged and forced by the convention party to authorize the submission of the question to the people. With a decisive democratic majority of fifty odd thousand in December, 1873, the question of calling the convention, a party measure, trembled in the balance of popular decision in August, 1875, and after strenuous endeavor carried by less than twenty per cent of the previous majority. The convention was held, a new constitution framed and is soon to be passed up by the people, with chances of adoption so meager that the most confident can only hope they may prevail, and that hope is so attenuated that the democratic party has declared in convention that voting for or against the instrument shall not be a test of democracy.

The reasons for this condition of affairs are plain. The first difference of opinion as to the necessity and expediency of the convention prejudiced many good men against its labor.

The convention was promised to be used to cut the state beyond a stated sum and yet went far beyond it, thereby irritating the people who have the bill to pay. The new constitution was promised to remedy the wrongs and extravagances under the old one, but when framed it did not find very general favor or recognition as accomplishing the objects designed, but upon the contrary is denounced as increasing the former ill, albeit in different forms and directions. Instead of reducing the machinery and expenses of government it promises to increase them. It made a clean sweep of the offices and declared a "new deal," and thereby introduced a powerful element of discord. Party lines have been thus disrupted and the people are claiming equal independence with the convention which caused the trouble.

To the true democrats, patriots and tax-payers of Georgia we commend a study of this pertinent example of the strife and "tittle-tattle" which a convention can produce. Who can say that a similar spectacle would not be presented in this state? We do not say that such results would follow, but the risk is worthy to be considered. The question we should wisely determine now is "are the recent and important changes in the constitution really to be desired?" even though it should bring upon us all the discord and difficulties seen in the Texas situation. It seems that the answer must be in the negative, because our necessities are not so grave as to make it wise, and because the harmony and happiness of our party, both in Georgia and throughout the country, and the poverty of the people are considerations which make it inexpedient.

looks to the benefit, the advancement, and the honor of every part of our common country. We are gentlemen of all parties, in this centennial year indeed have a jubilee of freedom. We divide with you the glories of the national life before that unhappy division—that four years' night of gloom and despair—and so we shall divide with you the glories of all the future.

Sir, my message is this: There are no confederates in this house; there are no confederates anywhere; there are no confederate schools; there are no confederate soldiers here—but the south is here, and she intends to remain. [Enthusiastic applause.] Go on and prove your qualifying right to remain in the country, and we shall swear to support, abrogate the pledges of your fathers, incite rage among people, and multiply your means of destruction. They will be the men of heaven or the sons of the earth, without number; but know this, for all your iniquities the south will never again seek a remedy. [Continued applause.] We are here; we are in the house of our fathers, our brothers are our companions, and we are at home again, thank God. [Much applause.]

We come to gratify no revenge, to tell stories, to make up tales; but in particular with a patriotic purpose to do whatever in our political power shall lie, to establish an independent and constitutional government of the government. We come charging upon the nation no wrongs to the south; the Union never wronged us. The nation has been an unmitigated blessing to us in every state, to every man of every color in America. We charge all our wrongs upon that "higher law" fanaticism, which never kept a people obeyed a law.

The association of those who, she believed, would not keep fidelity to their country; the south sought to go to heaven; but far from heaven, lost its fidelity for the constitution which our fathers made, when we sought "to go hither."

Brave men in the north, followers of Webster and Fillmore, of Clay and Cass, and Douglas—who you fought for the south; you could fight no better; and the sword was sheathed—we have no quarrel with you, whether republicans or democrats.

Morrison offered a resolution calling on the president for the correspondence with Spain about Cuba. Adopted.

Kingsbury offered a resolution instructing the judiciary committee to consider the law in the District of Columbia relating to that act.

The judiciary committee voted to sustain the resolution.

The bill, after a vote of 105, nays, 102, almost a party vote.

The house went into a committee of the whole on the omnibus bill and voted to sustain it. The bill was referred to the committee on public works and objects; and provision in any amendment to the bill changing the existing law, shall be left out, except such as being germane to the matter of the bill, shall stand as expeditious.
